Tall Stories Directors Award 2024 Call Out

Tall Stories are looking for emerging directors to apply for the Tall Stories Directors Award. Three theatre directors will receive 5 days each of free use of the Tall Stories Studio to develop their storytelling theatre practice, plus mentoring and a £1000 financial contribution to go towards any costs for the week.

We are looking for theatre directors who are testing ideas or creating shows which:

- Involve narration and/or storytelling that directly addresses the audience, e.g.

“Alice followed the White Rabbit down the rabbit-hole, then found herself falling down a very deep well...”

“As Gregor Samsa awoke one morning, he found himself transformed into a gigantic insect.”

- Are original pieces.

Retellings/adaptations of existing stories are suitable; pieces that use a script that has previously been performed would not be suitable.

- Are for any audience and age group.

We are especially interested to hear from directors who live in Islington (and neighbouring boroughs) and/or who are from under-represented backgrounds in the theatre industry.

Chosen directors will be offered:

- One week of free rehearsal space at the Tall Stories Studio in Islington.

It is not compulsory to have a public sharing, but on your last day in the space, we would like you to share with one or more Tall Stories team members what you have been working on during the week.
 - e.g. an extract or showing of ideas to Tall Stories staff, a presentation of thoughts and ideas, or an informal chat with a Tall Stories team member.
 - Ideas do not need to be fully formed. We want you to use the space to best support you and your ideas over the week.
